INDIA

Being the seventh-largest country by area in the world, India stretches from Himalayan peaks to Indian coastlines. The country is well-known for the population of Hindus, ancient mosques, stunning landscape, centuries-old rituals and the world-class curry dishes. While those brilliant things keep attracting people to visit India, one may have a different feeling due to the dust, dung smell, the crowd and the risk of food poisoning. Travellers either love it or hate it. But the choice they have been always making is to pack up and go.

Trek in the Himalayas

The Markha Valley and Hemis Festival trek is probably the most popular in the Indian Himalaya. There are stunning mountain scenery, remote monasteries and a chance to see snow leopards. While trekking always requires a certain level of physical strengths, anyone can do a short one to experience the Himalayas biodiversity.

Practice Yoga

Rishikesh is well-known as the national capital of health. It is said that you would come in with a disturbed mind and come out feeling like Lord Buddha. While the magic of the land is still a doubt, it is true that there is traditional self-healing science, including yoga, going on in this place. Plus, the river, nature and the local life would take anyone to their extreme relaxation.

Ride a camel

There are desserts around the country, where camels can be found as a means of transportation. In Jodhpur or Jaisalmer, tourists can take a camel safari tour to explore the desert landscape on the back of a camel. Some trips may last up to a week and include night camping under the stars.
04

Stay on a houseboat
Located in the south of India, Kerala has been famous for its backwater and houseboats. The rail network is huge, connecting a lot of destinations across the country. STAY HEALTHY

While India’s healthcare system is generally good, there are still big differences between the public and private sectors. However, the private sectors prove to have better quality and lower cost services. Common diseases in India are diarrhea, typhoid, and tetanus. In an emergency, you must quickly get transferred to the nearest medical centres for treatment and advice. We highly recommend that all travellers should purchase travel insurance for peace of mind.
